Unusual Methods Employed To Take In Catch From Canal

(From Our Own Correspondent)

TRAVERS. — The gates at the Lake McGregor south dam and the gates at the Little Bow reservoir were closed down on Wednesday, resulting in a large influx of fishermen, the canal being alive with white fish as the water drains away the fish are left in the shallow holes. All kinds of methods are used to get the fish out, but those using nets were unfortunate as an inspector from the Fish and Game Department seized all nets in use, but allowed the owners to keep the fish. Pitch forks, scoop shovels and homemade nets of wire netting were also employed.

As the water dries up the fish die as there is no way for them to get back to the lake once the gates are closed. Thousands of pounds of white fish are taken out or die in the canal. Many trucks loaded with fish have been seen; some from the Hutterite Colony south of Lethbridge. A number of Japanese from the Picture Butte district have also been fishing.

it increases milk production ten to 20 per cent. Butterfat shoots up 30 to 50 per cent. Within a week after thyro-protein feeding is started, many a Holstein that normally gives milk containing three and a half per cent butterfat will boost it to four. Jerseys that were giving five per cent milk often enrich it to six.

"Thyro-protein increases egg production in chickens ten per cent, largely by preventing the usual hot-weather slump. It also hastens feather growth, which is important because it is related to early laying. If a fourth of our present number of hens were to get thyro-protein they would lay nearly two billion more eggs than last year

"Thyro-protein speeds up growth of young animals by at least ten per cent, bringing them into production earlier or getting them to market sooner."

If such treatment was given every cow on the American continent it would add billions of gallons to production of milk. Perhaps there would be too much milk, but consumption can also be enlarged to the benefit of the race, especially the young growing people.

The preparation also enables year-round breeding. That would have, of course, to be regulated, else there would be a surplus of livestock. There is no danger of "burning up" a cow or a hen. The dosage has to be regulated, but hens laid more eggs the third year than they did the first.

Just as astonishing as thyro-protein is thiouracil, the drug that slows the thyroid. Eventually it may make most toxic-goiter operations in humans unnecessary. Dr. Turner finds that in livestock it stops growth and hastens fattening. By adding as little as one-tenth of one per cent of the drug to poultry feed he has found that he can fatten Leghorn broilers as much in two weeks as he used to in ten. Fantastic as it seems, a farmer can feed thyro-protein to a steer calf to speed his early growth, then substitute thiouracil to stop this growth and fatten him in a hurry. Thus he can tailor his livestock to meet market demands.

KING OF THE WATERS

(Brantford Expositor)

Prize for the best fish story of the year should go to Conservation Department officials at Albany, N.Y. They say the "mysterious monster" that defied and baffled fishermen at Round Lake for years, by breaking the strongest of tackle, has died of old age.

It turned out to be a large-mouthed bass weighing eleven and a half pounds and measuring more than 30 inches in length.

This tops the previous record of 10 pounds six ounces.

NO BALLYHOO HERE

(Chicago Daily News)

Over the air flow the dulcet tones of the radio announcers, extolling a cigarette which soothes the nerves . . . or gives the smokers a lift . . . or stops him from coughing . . . or helps him make decisions.

In refreshing contrast is the label on a cigarette put out by National Co-operatives, Inc. Here is candor unique in advertising:

"These cigarettes are made of quality domestic tobaccos, expertly blended to give a mild, satisfying smoke.

"Except for the lack of ballyhoo, they will be found to differ very little from brands of more widely heralded renown.

"Affording the same degree of enjoyment to those who relish smoking a good cigarette, they contain, as well, about the same amount of nicotine and other ingredients generally believed to be injurious to health."

In a badly-lit cafe, sea-faring men smoked and drank their rum. Suddenly a huge man burst through the doors.

"Is anyone here called Donovan," he roared.

No one spoke. A few customers began to edge their way uneasily towards the door.

"Is there anyone here called Donovan?" he demanded again.

A very small, timid man rose from a table in one corner and said: "Yes, my name is Donovan. Who wants me?"

"Oh, so you're Donovan, are you?" growled the man-mountain. "I've a debt to settle with you."

He strode across the room, picked up the little man with one hand and battered him senseless with the other. Then he dropped him on the floor and left the cafe.

Twenty minutes later the little man recovered consciousness, got up painfully, smiled and said: "I thought I could fool him. My name's not Donovan."

"MEXICAN BULLS"

(Animals Magazine)

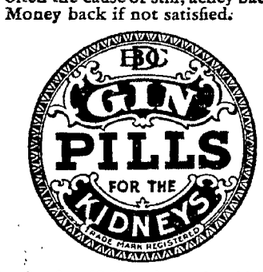

The bison really had the early American explorers puzzled.

No one knew what to call the beasts. Some adventurers merely said "cow" when talking about one of the big animals, but Cortes, conqueror of Mexico, called them, "Mexican Bulls".

In a written report Cortes sent to the court of Spain, he went into much detail about the huge herds of terrifying creatures which had manes just like lions, skulls like bulls, and humps the same as camels.
